Dear Families,

It has come to the end of the year, and this will be my final newsletter. I can't believe how quickly the year has come and gone.

Of course, the blog will still be up and running so feel free to check it out. I also plan on sending home a list of summer suggestions for your children so they can maintain their reading and math skills throughout the summer. Many of the ideas are ways your child can practice their reading and math online.

Shelburne Museum was a blast yesterday! Their new passport program is an amazing learning experience. I hope your child shared their passport with you and told you all that they did. Thanks to all of the chaperones that helped make this a successful day. The weather was quite comfortable and the day passed quickly.

We have completed all assessments and will end the year completing a photo story of 3rd grade memories. Your child will have access to all of the photos I took this year, and choose the ones they want for their "memory bank". I can either email the photo story to you or your child can bring in a flash drive for me to save it on. Discuss this with your child and let me know what you would prefer, if anything.
